Student Body To Determine Fate Of UK Honor System In Election Next December

Campus Organizations Will Consider Plans

The question of adopting an honor system at UK will be submitted to a vote of the student body at the Student Government Association elections in December.

This positive action toward determining the future status of honor system proposals was taken by assembly members at the last SGA meeting of the year Monday night.

Before the final procedures are determined for a tentative operation plan, several alternative honor system proposals will be circulated among various organizations on the campus to eventually formulate a basic honor system plan.

An SGA committee, named to study the proposal and headed by Al Stelberg, submitted a set of alternatives which could be studied by faculty and student leaders in finally working out the honor system which would go into effect at UK, providing the student body approves the plan in December.

Other Plans Studied

This committee consulted with various campus groups and received replies from many colleges and universities throughout the United States where effective honor systems are reportedly being used.

Under the tentative plan, enrolling students would be required to sign an honor pledge before entering the University. However, one possible drawback to this proposal, as Stelberg pointed out, stems from the fact that no one could be refused admittance to the University on this basis alone, under present regulations.

In fact, replies from other colleges and universities which have honor systems in effect indicate that strictly enforced plans are used only at private institutions. State universities find it difficult to refuse admission on these grounds, Stelberg said.

No Change In Pledge

Of the tentative proposals drafted by the SGA committee for future study and correction, only two sections would not be subject to any alteration. These are the pledge to be signed by students and a definition of an honor system.

The pledge states:

"I do hereby accept and fully assume the responsibilities and obligations of the honor system as it applies at UK. I understand that in accepting this pledge as a code of conduct during my stay at UK—that I mean to pledge myself neither to give nor receive aid in any examination, and if I see anyone else doing so, I shall further pledge my word that the Student Council will be informed within a period of 24 hours of the close of the exam either by the offender or by myself.

"I furthermore agree to safeguard, uphold, and preserve the honor system to the best of my ability at all times and under all circumstances."

Questions Not Decided

Final questions to be decided by future conferences on the campus would include whether the judiciary body would be composed of SGA members, students, or faculty members. The exact powers of the group could include expulsion or suspension, restriction, or only recommendations.

Before finally deciding to submit the honor system question to a vote of the student body, several assembly members sought to defeat all honor system proposals.

This small bloc of SGA stated that the students did not want anything to do with an honor system and introduced a motion to kill all present plans.

Immediately opposition to this motion developed. Opposing assembly members pointed out that SGA was not a truly representative body and could not reflect all student opinion. These members emphasized that the only positive way to find out if UK students actually wanted the system was to have an election.

Committee Formed

One additional opposing factor to killing all honor system proposals was stated by Wendell Norman, vice president of SGA. He pointed out that a student-faculty committee had been formed following the first honor system suggestion in March. "Why should SGA back out now after being the first to propose it?" he asked.

In other business completed at the final SGA meeting, an appropriation not to exceed $125 was approved by assembly members for financing an orchestra at the College Night activities planned for Sept. 17. This is an annual feature of orientation week. SGA will also operate a concession booth at the event.

SGA went on record as disapproving announced plans for graduating seniors, who are members of the ROTC, to march with the military units to the Baccalaureate exercises Sunday afternoon. These seniors would not be permitted to wear their gowns nor march with the senior group, according to present plans.

ROTC units are participating in the Baccalaureate service as their salute to the Korean war dead, who will be honored in special dedicatory exercises at the Baccalaureate.

Exam Week Treat

This invitation to all students, faculty, and staff members has been issued by the UK Alumni Association:

The Alumni Association would like to have you enjoy free coffee, cokes, and cookies as its guests during exam week. Come into the Music Room in the Student Union from 10 to 12 noon and 1:30 to 4 p.m. (DST) Tuesday through Friday. We will be looking forward to seeing you.

Terrell To Advise California Head On Bay Crossing

Dr. Daniel V. Terrell, dean of the College of Engineering, will be one of two consultant experts in the construction of a San Francisco bridge, estimated to cost upward of $200 million, the Department of Engineering announced.

Dean Terrell was appointed by the Governor of California, Goodwin J. Knight, as was Richard E. Dougherty of the firm of Seeley, Stephenson, Value-Knecht of New York. The bridge, which will cross the San Francisco Bay in the south, extending from Third Street in San Francisco to a point in Alameda, was approved by the Secretary of the Army on an application by the Department of Public Works in San Francisco.

Gov. Knight announced that these two nationally known engineers will advise him as chairman of the Toll Bridge Authority and the Department of Public Works on all phases of the programming for the new crossing.

The funds available for this work are the proceeds of the sale of San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge 1951 Refunding and Improvement Toll Bridge Revenue Bonds, Series D, in the amount of $1,500,000.

The proposed underwater tubes which made possible the plan for a southern crossing of the Bay were designed by Norman C. Raab, chief of the Division of San Francisco Bay Toll Crossings.

Block And Bridle Presents Awards

Block and Bridle, agriculture honorary, presented awards Monday night to individuals placing highest in the annual Block and Bridle judging contest, held May 20.

Those receiving trophies were Jim Brogli, beef cattle; Dick Pedigo, sheep, and Bill Poor, swine. Pedigo also received a trophy for the highest over-all score and a trophy for giving highest individual in giving reasons.

Ag Dean Returns From Yugoslavia

Frank J. Welch, dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, has recently returned from a three weeks' tour of Yugoslavia in co-operation with the Foreign Operations Administrations and the State Department.

Dean Welch's tour was to study and appraise the supply and demand situation with reference to wheat, to study education and research in the field of agriculture, to appraise the recent policy and program changes and their influence on agriculture production, and to appraise the current year's wheat production prospects.

He visited universities, research institutes, state farms, co-operative farms, and individual farms. He conferred with high ranking government officials, farm managers and common laborers. Six days were spent traveling about the country in automobile.

The agricultural methods in Yugoslavia are crude, Dean Welch reported. The farmers utilize oxen and horses, with very little mechanized equipment. "Our aid to them has gone in the form of food grains and industrial machinery," he said. The people are poor, but he saw no abject poverty such as may be found in some of the countries of the Far East.

"The thing that impressed me most was the status of the women. They worked on the farms, cleaned streets, and did all sorts of heavy labor," he said.

Dean Welch reported that he was given complete freedom while in the country. He received answers, both verbal and written, to all of his questions. The people of Yugoslavia, as a whole, are very friendly to the United States, he said.

Less than half the agriculture land is in state and collective farms, according to Dean Welch, with the private farms averaging about 25 or 30 acres. The Party has met strong resistance on the part of the serfs when they attempt to collectivize the farms.

In addition to the selection of Miss Edwards, David Noyes has been appointed as business manager on the Kentuckian staff.

These staff appointments were approved Wednesday by the Board of Student Publications, which includes the director of the School of Journalism, the University Comptroller, and Student Government Association representative.

In assuming the Kernel editorship, Butler moved up from the news editor position, which he held this semester. He also wrote a weekly column, "The Tool Box," throughout the past year.

Editor From Louisville
A native of Louisville, the new Kernel editor has served as secretary of the Henry Watterson Press Club and is a former staff member of Stylus, UK literary magazine.

Butler is a member of Phi Kappa Tau fraternity and a graduate of Louisville Male High School. He is a junior journalism major.

Miss Edwards, a sophomore in the College of Education, was managing editor of this year's Kentuckian. A native of Decatur, Ga., the new yearbook editor is YWCA social chairman, vice president of the freshmen Y, and a member of the University social committee.

The Kentuckian editor is also Chi Omega pledge mistress.

New Managing Editor
Miss Schwarz moved up from the assistant managing editor's position, in which she has served this semester, to become managing editor of the Kernel. She is a junior journalism major from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

A member of Delta Zeta sorority, Miss Schwarz is vice president of Suky, secretary of Chi Delta Phi, and a member of SGA. In addition the new managing editor is past president of the House President's Council and president of Theta Sigma Phi. A member of Mortar Board, she was chosen one of three outstanding junior women journalists and was assistant editor of the K-Book.

ROTC Graduates Will Have Two Choices; Certificates, National Guard Officerships

ROTC graduates who were to receive certificates of completion instead of commissions in the Air Force will be permitted to become officers in the Air National Guard, according to instructions recently received by the Department of Air Science and Tactics from Headquarters, Air Force ROTC in Washington. These graduates would be given an option of selecting the National Guard plan or continuing under the present operation. Students selecting the certificate of completion plan would enlist in the grade of airman 3rd class for the period normally required to be served by a draftee.

At the end of this service, the recruit could apply for a reserve commission in the Air Force.

Training In 4 Periods

However, the new optional plan calls for graduates to be ordered to training duty with the Air Force in four quarterly periods. National selective service headquarters has agreed that applicants under this plan will receive 60 days continued deferment following graduation in order to permit necessary processing.

Only AFROTC graduates completing commissioning requirements from May 1, 1954 through April 30, 1955, in categories II and III, who are scheduled to receive certificates of completion, are eligible.

Applicants acceptable to the respective states will be appointed by the Air Force as reserve second lieutenants and then appointed as second lieutenants in the Air National Guard by their respective states. This procedure affects their membership in the National Guard, the instructions stated.

39 To Be Affected

Thirty-nine AFROTC graduates at UK will be affected by the newly announced procedure. Until the new instructions were received, these students were scheduled to receive certificates of completion and could not be commissioned or called to active duty.

However, the new regulations will permit these individuals an option of applying for a commission as part of a nation-wide program to commission about 5,000 students who were in the same category.

Each applicant will sign an agreement which stipulates that he will serve on duty with the active Air Force for a period of three years and an additional three years of active participation in an Air National Guard unit. This would include a minimum of 48 paid unit training assemblies and 15 days field training annually.

Should the tour of duty with the active Air Force be less than three years, the officer will be required to serve a sufficient amount of time in Air Guard units to total six years of active participation in the reserve forces.

Complete details of the new plan can be secured from the Department of Air Science and Tactics.

School Announces Graduation Plans

Commencement exercises of the University School will be at 7 p.m. (DST) Thursday in the school's auditorium, Dr. Lyman Ginger, Director of the University School, announced today.

Dr. Frank G. Dickey, dean of the College of Education, will deliver the commencement address.

The 30 graduates will receive their diplomas from Dr. Ginger. The girls' choir of University High will sing. The Rev. J. W. Angell, pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, will deliver the invocation and benediction, Dr. Ginger stated.

Baccalaureate Services To Launch Senior Activities

Honorary Doctor of Laws degrees will be conferred upon two native Kentuckians at the 87th annual commencement exercises scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday, June 4 in Memorial Coliseum.

Named to receive the honor are Stephen A. Rapier, director of the Electrical Manufacturers Export Company in New York City, and Joseph M. Hartfield, senior partner of White and Case law firm in New York City.

The awarding of degrees to approximately 800 UK students at the commencement program will climax a full week of class reunions, luncheons, receptions, and graduation activities.

Mr. Rapier, a native of Knob Creek in Larue County, started in the electrical field as a sales engineer with the General Electric Company in Latin America. Then in 1918 he opened his own business, the Electrical Manufacturers Export Company.

Entered Engineering College
He entered the College of Engineering at UK but received an appointment in the Marine corps before completing his full course of study.

Named as an honorary degree recipient, Mr. Rapier was cited for his service to the nation in developing friendship with more than 100 foreign countries. His contributions to a better relationship in international business were also named.

Mr. Hartfield is a native of Union County and a member of one of the largest law firms in the world. He is a leader in many national cultural and welfare projects, including the Metropolitan Opera Association and the American Red Cross.

His achievement in his chosen profession and lifelong interest in and devotion to his native state were cited for the Doctor of Laws degree presentation.

Baccalaureate Opens Week
Commencement week activities open with the annual Baccalaureate exercises at 4 p.m. (DST) Sunday in Memorial Coliseum. Speaker at the service will be Dr. Homer W. Carpenter, minister ecumenical of the First Christian Church in Louisville. The topic for Dr. Carpenter's address will be "The Likeness of a King."

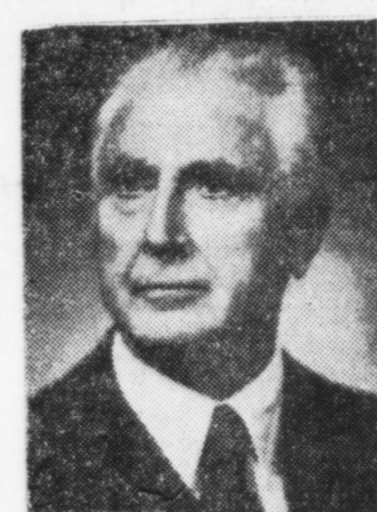

Dedicatory ceremonies for Kentucky's 1,200 Korean war dead will be observed at this year's Baccalaureate. A section of the Coliseum will be reserved for the parents, children, and relatives of the Korean dead. More than 1,500 requests for seat reservations have been received.

All members of the Army and Air Force ROTC will march, in uniform, to the dedicatory service. Names of the Korean War dead, compiled by the Kentucky War Memorial Survey, have recently been added to the Honor Roll plaques in the Coliseum.

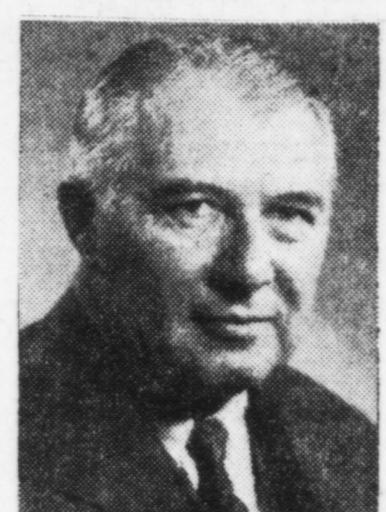

Dr. Gatton To Speak
Dr. Harper Gatton, trustee of the University and executive vice president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, will be the principal speaker at the annual commencement luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Thursday in the Bluegrass Room of Student Union.

Included on the program this year will be musical numbers by Gail Jennings, sophomore in Arts and Sciences, accompanied by Marilyn Gregory.

Honor System Can't Eliminate The Human Habit Of Cheating

An SGA committee has come up with several different suggestions as to how an honor system might be established at the University. At no point in the discussion of the matter did SGA or the committee ask whether there was a need for an honor system at UK—if there is a condition at the University which warrants such a set up.

Furthermore, SGA did not seem to object to such frequent terms in the discussion as "proctor," "guilty," "punishment," "jury," "suspension," "fines," and so on. We did object, because police methods are not what is needed to clear up what may be fairly termed as a mild case of sporadic dishonesty at UK.

It is true that cheating has occurred on this campus. Widening the scope of outlook, it may be said that cheating is a human trait found universally, one that is impossible to handle by any system of clauses, rules, and regulations. To cure the effect, it is necessary to find the cause.

Primarily, the cause is in the inefficient management of tests and examinations. Fraternity and sorority files abound in such material—ROTC manuals, classified as "restricted," are as common as mosquitoes in a swamp. And, in some cases, tests have been obtained several days—or even hours—before examination time.

Buildings have been entered for the purpose of obtaining tests—office doors forced, drawers and files rifled. A rarer occurrence is the actual copying of tests during examinations. Most students who are inclined to risk cheating feel that this is too dangerous, so the other methods are favored.

Perhaps the temptation is too great for the weak-willed cheaters. With the knowledge that tests and examinations are mimeographed—or typed—in advance, many students might feel a compulsion to "stop by the prof's office to see what's on hand." Some of them do, resulting in added material for the good old filing cabinets.

If more tests were made up immediately before examinations, if buildings were more closely watched before and during examination periods, and if double checks were made against repeating the same tests year after year, nine-tenths of the cheating on campus would be eliminated. An honor system would be an unpleasant burden for both students and Administration.

Next Few Months Will Bear Watching

Because we are college students, often tied up with the rituals of formal education, we often forget that we're living in the most colorful times since written history began. So, just as a reminder, we'd like to point out a few of the events which will be worthwhile watching during the summer months.

Of first importance is the situation in Asia. East and West are racing to establish boundaries which will be favorable to their respective objectives. In the next two or three months, the location of these boundaries—affecting millions of people—will be determined by how much aid the West gives to the East—and how fast it is given.

On the other side of the world, in Morocco, another situation is arising in the manner of the Indo-China conflict. French blundering and narrow-mindedness has thrown that area of the world on the verge of a civil war, a war which would be wholeheartedly backed by the Communists. The United States, in addition to having huge air bases there, has more than 50,000 Americans there with business interests.

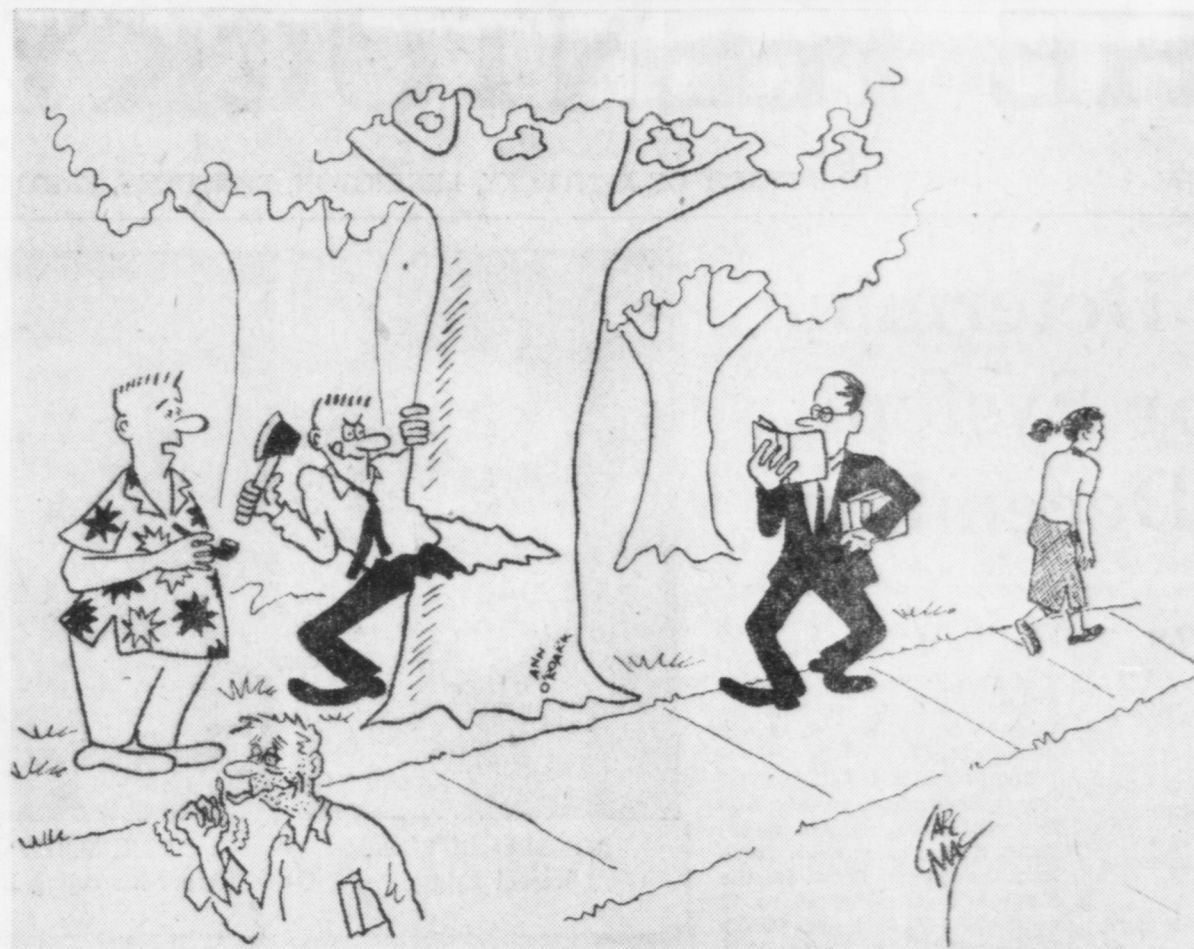

In South America, there will be increasing alarm over Red aid to Guatemala. We have shipped arms and equipment to the countries surrounding Guatemala, and the chances of small, scattered battles in that part of the hemisphere are great. The Monroe Doctrine will receive more attention than ever before.

During the summer, the scientific world will buzz with activity. Soon, the huge 200-inch "eye" of Mt. Palomar will be turned on the planet Mars in an attempt to solve some of the questions concerning the possibility of life there. Flying saucer rumors and little-green-men-from-Mars stories will crop up in newspapers all over the United States. This summer should be interesting.

reminded of gay times on the drill field . . . those wonderful, hot, soggy days when we marched ourselves into a disciplinary frame of mind.

Others of us will have nostalgic memories of pleasant hours spent in the library—especially on the warm evenings of spring. And, then, there will always be the fond recollections of pleasant words from our professors—visions of their smiles of encouragement and praise of our work. As the summer months wear on, we shall begin to think more and more of the grand life we lead here, of the leisurely days and nights.

Last, but not least, we shall sadly think of active meetings, of dressing for dinner, of going to sorority desserts, of smiling at obnoxious alums, of trying to wheedle the cook out of an extra piece of toast, of trying to find toothpaste after a corned beef and cabbage banquet, and of breaking shoe-laces at the big formal—or of losing a room mate's cuff links. Ah, sweet school, how we shall miss thee!

"But, Ed, if you don't study how're you going to pass?"

And Now We Say Our Farewell To A Doggone Good Columnist

By LESLIE MORRIS

It was just about eight months ago that we went to the Kernel folk and asked for a chance to try a little experiment. And they, crusading souls all, gave us the green flash. Well, our wee experiment was simply to see if UK denizens would be interested in swallowing something a mite divorced from the doings along the Blue and White boardwalk—and we promised a column as changeable as a kaleidoscope.

We haven't stepped in our own footprints, that's for sure, and we've covered a lot of ground, so it's about that time to clasp on the lid and bid a fond adieu.

But while we're reminiscing, we'd like to look back briefly upon the thousands of lines that we perpetrated during this academic year. . . . We spilled some ink on a lot of personalities and subjects: Bob Hope, Al Capp, Jack Webb, Johnnie Ray, Arthur Godfrey, Jane Russell, Fred Waring, Whitaker Chambers, Marilyn Monroe, Rita Hayworth, et al; We've talked about TV shows, radio shows, stage shows, nite-club shows, screen shows—

We reviewed so many movies that we have the only eye-balls in captivity which have adjusted themselves to 3-D without specs. And we've been side-tracked several times: namely to knock the chip off Earl Ruby's shoulder, to have a little fun with the Family's Look, to preach a sermon or two. We've traveled from Hollywood to Las Vegas to New York and Chicago and back again. . . . Oh it's been a long year, and, frankly, we're kinda tired.

We made a lot of mistakes, but we had our high-spots, too, and our letters pro-and-con kind of gave us the edge—nice people. Looking back, we made quite a few lucky guesses: we scored a grand-slam with our Academy Award predictions, even though it hurt us to pick Jim Jones' swabbed down version of "Eternity" (we liked "Roman Holiday"); we blazed the trail for CinemaScope and for a while we thought we had gone overboard, but we've never been sorry—its here to stay, even though we were much disappointed with "The Robe" and said so, and made a few people mad.

And there was the time on March 5 that we reviewed Leland Hayward's TV version of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes," and commented that the box-screen would soon be showing "a lot of Broadway oldies done-up TV-style," and we were so right—the Great White Way moved all of its old baggage into Television City after the Merman minstrel-smash.

And, of course, we put in our two-cents worth about the local Derby shows, and said: one, the two-ticket package deal would have to go, and, two, that they weren't going to pack the coliseum at seven bucks a shot. Well, we were proved right, but we doubt if the Festival people would admit it. We could go on, but we wouldn't know where to end—and if we started listing all of our blunders we'd slop over onto page three.

So we'll just take time to thank the fine people who have helped us along: Noi Peers (whom we miss muchly), Diane Renaker (our congrats to "Red" Archer for snagging this gal); Bob Cox, a swell guy; several nameless inmates of Vassar; Brother Boyle (who never liked a word we wrote), and to everybody who took time to write us or waylay us on campus—your advice and suggestions were invaluable.

So that about wraps it up for this season, and "The Gallery" (be it ever so humble) shall be laid to rest. As for us, we'll be fast asleep in the Law Lounge next year, and we don't think we'll ever pass this way again. Bu-nous noches, as the Italians say. . . .

Senator Doaper

Three of the dullest things in the world are: watching a moth flit around a lamp bulb; playing canasta with little brothers and sisters while the car is in the garage; sorority desserts.

We've noticed that leaving school for the summer is like running away from home. It's fun at first, but after a while you wish you were back.

A good deal of the mystery concerning the origin and survival of the human race can be explained by looking at the pretty coeds in their summer attire.

If you really want to see a man suffer from a guilty conscience, address your postcards to the pros after final examinations are over.

It's a shame, but it looks like the fence by the Journalism Building isn't going to be taken down, as was promised not long ago. That thing is about as welcome as an 8 o'clock class after a big weekend.

We wonder if the fellows in ROTC aren't being a little bitter this week? After all fellows, it's FUN to attend baccalaureate services. Besides, we can't have a skimpy-looking audience.

There's a student over in engineering who has a little gadget that turns pink when it's going to rain. One of his friends swears the engineer's face turns blue when the gadget stays blue when it should have turned pink. Clear?

No one knows for sure, but some people have speculated that the fence by the Journalism Building, if it were wired, would electrocute half the population of Lexington in a year's time.

Dear Editor,

Well, buddy, it looks like we've made it through another terrible year. Even with those sadistic examinations a few days off, things are looking up. It's a great big, wonderful world. Looking back over the year, it's plain as pie that we had it good, better than ever before.

We didn't get sent to Indo-China, yet. The country still hasn't had a depression, in spite of some dismal-minded politicians, no H-bombs have dropped on Lexington, and the Faculty paid a little attention to the fraternity problems.

There weren't any epidemics, and not too many people died of starvation. Most of our friends came through the winter with enough fuel and clothing to stave off freezing weather and drafty windows, and some of us even saved up enough money to enjoy ourselves occasionally.

Our Nature Boy, Upset By Finals, Takes The Jump

(The scene is finals week, that time of year when the library is competing with the Coliseum for record-breaking attendance figures. But some brave souls who do not like crowds, namely crowded libraries, have ventured out into the wilds of nature—the beach. And that is where we find Al Leoop and his girl, Clara.)

"Well, here we are at the beach, Clara. It certainly is a fine day for studying. If only I didn't have to get back in time for that darling dessert."

"What dessert do you mean, Al?"

"Oh, the Thigh Thigh Thigh's are having a dessert in honor of the 60th birthday of Rudolph Valentino, and we have to attend. If I don't attend I'm going to be docked five dollars."

"That's the most absurd thing I've ever heard of. If I were in your place, I just wouldn't go and I wouldn't pay the fine."

"That is a pretty good idea, but you realize that we have the fraternity reputation to think of. Just last week one of our chief rivals ate nearly 15 gallons of strawberries at the Thigh Thigh Thigh house. And now it's up to us to top that record. But that's enough of that. Let's get into the water."

"The water is so nice, isn't it, Al?"

"It certainly is, Clara."

"It's so refreshing, so invigorating, so cool."

"I just love water. I always have, since the first time I took a bath. What would we do without water?"

"Yeah, Clara. You love water, it's so refreshing. SO WHY DON'T YOU COME IN?"

"But, Al, I'd mess up my hair. And my new bathing suit. You wouldn't want me to get it wet, would you?"

"Sure, Clara. I wouldn't want you to get your golden tresses wet. And your new bathing suit, why what fool would think of getting such a beautiful suit even the least bit damp?"

"I knew you would see it my way. You're so understanding."

"Yeah, I guess I am at that. And you forgot, I'm also mighty sweet."

"You sure are, Al. So why don't you crawl right up here on the sand and put your head on my shoulder. . . . And, Al, just look at my complexion!"

"I see it. And that reminds me, I have a final in Yellow Journalism tomorrow."

"Al, you're the most unromantic fellow I've ever known. Sometimes I think you're asexual."

"Just watch what you call me. I've been around in my time. Just because you've had a course in Applied Anatomy doesn't mean that you can call me names. WOW! Get that crazy handkerchief Florence Nightingown has on!"

"Al, that's a bathing suit."

"It looks like a handkerchief to me."

"And where do you think you're going?"

"Well, I have a sniffling nose and I thought I would. . . ."

"Al, you come back here! I'll not have you chasing after other girls. And besides, I thought you said that we'd study if we came to the beach."

"You're right. I should be studying Interval Calculous. Let's see, interval $\cos x \, dx$ equals $\sin x$. Multiply by y and then let me see. . . ."

"The water surely does look nice."

" . . . and then take the cosine xy and add water. . . ."

"There's a Duncan Doughnut over there, Al. And look who he has with him."

" . . . and take the log of $\sin x$ plus one doughnut. . . ."

"I thought she was pinned to Charley. Charley wrecked his convertible though. She hates to walk."

" . . . so interval $\cos x \, dx$ equals $\sin x$ in a wrecked convertible. . . . Why don't you shut up? Can't you see I'm trying to study. You have no consideration for me. You're just like the rest of them. Why do I deserve this fate?"

"Oh, Al, you're so cute when you're mad. Just look at those darling freckles get red. Al, where are you going? . . . No, not to the bridge. Please don't jump! I won't bother you again. I promise."

"You mean you won't mention the water, Duncan Doughnut, who he is with, Charley, or his wrecked convertible?"

"Please come down and I won't say another word."

"I'm a fool. I shouldn't go back. But, she promised."

"Oh, Al, I'm so glad you came down. I thought for a moment that you were going to jump. And guess who drove up while you were up there? Valeria Fever and Harry Halitosis. They're over by the . . . Quentin, come back!"

" . . . And if it's not messed up time, it's bathing suits. And if it's not those finals, it's Clara. Why wasn't I born an Alpha particle? I just can't take it. Goodby, sad world. . . ."

The grounds on the campus have been covered over in many places by fresh sod. The shape and distribution of these fresh plots has us wondering if they haven't at last mustered the courage to bury some of the quaint old ideas floating around in classrooms.

Academic Driftwood Should Be Abolished

College newspapers customarily give graduating seniors a pat on the back, wish them good luck, and philosophize on the ways of life. Well, we'll go along as far as the pats on the back and the good luck wishes are concerned. However, there is one small matter which disturbs us slightly—the matter of the never-graduating student—the academic deadwood in the scholastic forest.

Students who fail and then return to school semester after semester are a joke on campus. Everyone knows about them, everyone talks about them, a few people even wonder about them. Who are these strange creatures? Why do they come back year after year? Why aren't they forbidden to return after failing to make the grade time after time?

That's what we'd like to know. If a student shows that he cannot meet the requirements set forth by the University, he should be told in no uncertain terms that he is unwelcome. There's no sense in having these poor people back time and time again.

The ultimate goal of institutions of education should be to impart knowledge to ever-changing groups of people—to teach and instruct generation after generation of a nation's people. With this objective in mind, it is impossible to tolerate the thought of permitting students who just don't have what it takes to keep coming back.

These people are not helping themselves, and they are slowing down the work in the classes in which they enroll. The Faculty, we feel, is aware of the problem. We hope that in the near future action will be taken to control the number of incapable students who return to UK semester after semester.

Ah, What Sad, Lingering Regrets We Feel As Summer Approaches

Ah, sweet summer, time of vacation and fun—and work. How sad it is to see nine months of school ended. How we regret saying farewell to those hour quizzes, tests, exams, term papers, "projects," research, drawings, maps, diagrams, charts, book reports, pop quizzes, and "outside reading."

Indeed, the regret is so strong, that we hardly know how we'll be able to stay away during the long summer months. Most of us are dreading a nice, healthy, eight-hour day's work, eight hours of play, and the same for sleep. We shall miss those eight hours of classes, 12 hours of study, and . . . yes, we're really going to miss the old place while we're gone.

Undoubtedly, we shall be plagued by dreams of first-thing-in-the-morning brain twisters, walking to old buildings through cold rainfall, slogging through snow to hear lectures, going without breakfast to absorb a little more knowledge. Some of us will be

PLUMMER PAMPERS PEEPS, or, Journalism Director is for the bird(s) . . . just kidding, of course (ha, ha). Dr. Niel Plummer, the man with the big heart, is taking care of what seems to be a baby robin. It seems that one of his children found the nestling de-nested in the back yard of their home, tossed out by a heartless mamma. The good man, moved by the situation, claims that he has unearthed untold millions of earthworms, bugs, beetles, and insects to keep the youngster healthy.

Then And Now

Alums From 14 Classes To Return For Reunion

Alumni Day at UK will be held Thursday with members of 14 classes returning for a special program of activities. Besides the organized reunions, many other graduates and former students are expected to be here to attend the commencement week programs.

In addition, the classes of 1906, '08, '09, '25, '26, '27, '28, '45, '46, '47, and '48 will hold their regularly scheduled reunions.

The registration of all alumni from 10:30 to 12:30 p.m. (DST) will take place Thursday morning, opening Alumni Day activities. At 12:30 p.m., an Alumni brunch will be held on the east concourse of Memorial Coliseum. That afternoon, from 4 to 6 p.m., President and Mrs. Donovan will entertain at their annual reception in the Maxwell Place garden.

'Raising A Robin Is For Birds,' UK Journalism Head Discovers

By BILL BILLITER

Raising a robin is for the birds—at least that's the opinion of Dr. Neil Plummer, director of the UK School of Journalism.

Dr. Plummer recently had the singular task of rearing a new-hatched baby robin, and according to the Journalism head, keeping an infant bird is a big job—even for the father of four children.

The robin fledgling, which was dubbed "Peeps," was discovered about a month ago in Dr. Plummer's front yard in Montclair by his six-year-old twin daughters, Carolyn and Catherine. The twins immediately seized the bird and carried it to "Pop."

"The bird had fallen out of its nest in a tree," Dr. Plummer said, "and even though we put it back in the nest, the mother bird wouldn't return." The school director added that the robin was only a day or so old and was composed chiefly of "featherless skin and a big mouth."

Twins Wanted Robin

Carolyn and Catherine and Dr. Plummer's other two children, Neil, Jr., 8, and Anne, 10, demanded that their father provide shelter for the displaced robin. "And that," said Dr. Plummer, "is how I got stuck with a bird."

The Journalism director stated that he placed "Peeps" in a cardboard box, expecting it to be dead by morning. "Unfortunately," he said, "the thing lived."

Although the four Plummer children assured him they would care for the robin, Dr. Plummer said he became chief caretaker.

"I had to get up at four in the morning sometimes to feed it," he stated. "It would jump around in its box making those horrible robin-noises until it was fed."

Worms And Water Given

"Peeps" food consisted of a sole diet of earthworms and water. The Journalism head said that the bird would open its mouth and that he simply deposited the worm "down the hatch."

According to Dr. Plummer, the bird survived the impossible. Besides being deprived of mother and nest, "Peeps" was subjected to the constant handling and "loving" of the four little Plummers.

The robin was taken to the University Elementary School for a day and was even brought to the UK Journalism Building for inspection and photographing. Despite all this, the robin waxed fat, grew feathers, and remained perfectly tame.

After two weeks "Peeps" outgrew its cardboard box and was placed in a large waste paper basket. "The thing used to sit on the edge of the basket and watch me drink my coffee in the morning," Dr. Plummer said.

Learns To Fly

Eventually the robin became big enough to fly, and it began to make flying sweeps and crash landings back and forth across the Plummer kitchen. "That was too much," the Journalism director said. "I decided then that the thing was big enough to make its own living."

The robin was placed outside in the vicinity of other Montclair robins, and eventually flew away with them.

Weekend Parties Are Forsaken; Cramming Replaces Social Life

By ANN O'ROARK

Five pencils sharpened, two reams of typing paper, 50 blue books, glasses cleaned, keep-awake pills (four bottles), all lights on, and approximately 2 million books—the recipe for the weekend.

Bake in an oven set for Boones-borough temperature (just for added temptation) and add a few good aromas of days gone by.

Just smell the fragrance of sun on multi-colored floats all decked with crepe paper and tin foil—that's May Day with its "million dollar mermaids" and pretty queens.

Then take a big whiff of sweet music and airy evening gowns—that's all the nights of spring dances and stuffed animals for favors. Add the fragrance of blended voices—that's the big song fest and the Carnival of Tunes.

Hay Ride Reminders

The odor of hay and wet grass—that's all the many hay rides, picnics, and swimming parties.

All this sure does add to the atmosphere that makes final exam week the most hazardous time of the year.

The 15 hours of sweating info' into your brain for a torturous exam of two hours, packing up for a long continuous holiday, and then the hardest of all—saying goodbye to those who won't be here next fall to yell at the football games or partake in the back-to-school celebration.

"Life at UK may be one big party" but that's just because of the frantic, happy kids that make the un-study times so much better than the crack-down times.

Well, pull up the old chair by the desk, forget the picture of the big doll (guy or gal) sitting on the dresser and try to keep up with your dates (in history that is).

Then try to figure out just what kind of preposterous questions (taken from the fine print in the footnotes or from under the pictures) the profs can dream up this time.

Final Exam Questions

This is really a test of fortitude and ability to concentrate—and if you pass it, you know you have really accomplished a lot—in fact the whole world has a pink bow around it—until the next final exam week.

P.S.—don't forget to return the bow tie you borrowed last October from some boy a friend of yours knew—and by the way the city might need those parking meters back (but then just why would anyone think a college student "borrowed" them?).

P.P.S. See you all next fall—have a wonderful vacation—and be rarin' to go when old September rolls around again.

'Pokie' Ditches Smith For 'Gone' Frat Man

By BILL BILLITER

Once upon a time in the wooded country that is now Virginia there lived a sultry Redskin named Pocahontas. This bronze beauty was the daughter of a solid chief, and the real hep braves of the outfit were frantic to marry her.

Pokie Girl, however, thought her well-tanned suitors were just so many squares, and so she stayed in her teepee day in and day out and watched TV. "It's better," said Pokie, "to be a sizzling spinsters than to hitch up with one of those schmoees in breechclouts." And so she waited.

Now it just so happened that a smooth sheik from England named Captain John Smith was in the vicinity trying to keep a colony going. Smith was a real gone flame thrower from the word go. His outfits were always the craziest, and he was the envy of every male on Jamestown's Muscle Beach.

For some reason the raunchy Redskins of old Virginia didn't cotton to the idea of the English colonists. Pokie's father, the big gun of all the injuns, decided that Smith and company should be discouraged from the real estate competition. So he and his cabinet puffed their nicotine sticks all one night and decided on a plan.

Chief Calls Assembly

Chief Oh-U-Kid (Pokie's father) called an assembly of all his ever-lovin' subjects after the big conference. "White creeps from across great waters strictly nowhere," said Oh-U-Kid. "They come to nab happy hunting grounds. Captain Smith is head-man of white masters."

"We bump off Smith, then rest of crazy colonists get shakes and leave our land."

Oh-U-Kid's people thought that this idea was the greatest, and so they set about plotting a dagnab for Smith. The roughest hoods of the tribe, carrying concealed bows and arrows, took to the forest in search of the English Captain. Meanwhile, Pocahontas still lived alone and watched TV.

Thus it was that solid Smith was saved from the axe. But the luscious Pocahontas soon flushed the good captain for a gone frat man named Rolfe, and eloped to England. Which just goes to show you never can trust a woman.

QUESTION:

What makes a
Lucky taste better?

ANSWER:

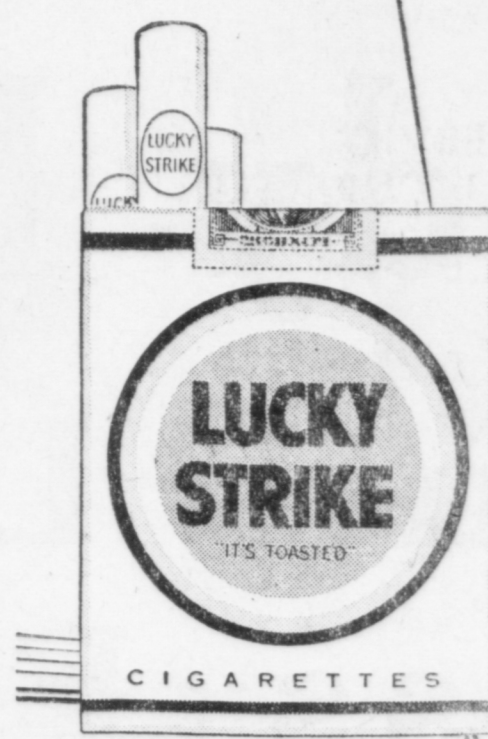

"IT'S TOASTED"
to taste better!

No question about it, Luckies taste better to thousands of college smokers.

No question about the reasons why Luckies taste better, either. Today, nearly everybody knows L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. And that fine tobacco is toasted to taste better.

"It's Toasted"—the famous Lucky Strike process—brings Luckies' tobacco to its peak of flavor... tones up this light, mild, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better.

So enjoy better taste in your cigarette. Be Happy—Go Lucky!

Luckies taste better

Once there was a Junior who devoted most of his time and energies to Social Pursuits, with correspondingly little emphasis on the Curriculum in the Catalog. Consequently, while he was Right Up There socially, academically he was close to the Point of No Return.

Topping it off was an Irate Ultimatum from the Male Parent, warning that his next acquisition had better be either a List of Passing Grades or a Social Security Card. All Our Boy could foresee was a lifetime at Hard Labor, unless Something Drastic happened.

So he made it happen. Invested heavily in benedrine and black coffee and lined up three super-skull Tutors. Night and day he Sweated It Out—and wound up with Remarkably Respectable Grades. First thing he did, naturally, was to consult his Trusty Telegrammer. (What—you haven't got WELCOME HOME — University of Tennessee students returned the coveted beer keg to Kentucky officials a week after it was stolen by a few embittered Vol fans. Kentucky's 27-21 victory was its first triumph in the series in 18 years.

Netters Make Big Comeback After Several Early Losses

The Wildcat tennis team, reaching peak form near the middle of the season, won 8 of their last 10 matches to wind up the season with a 9-6 mark.

The netters gained their final two victories with wins over Ft. Knox last Saturday and Centre on Monday. They had previously lost to the Ft. Knox team 5-2 in the second match of the season but the netters reversed the decision to take a 7-2 margin from the soldiers.

The tennis squad lost four of their five matches before hitting the comeback trail. They were beaten by Tennessee, Ft. Knox, Western and Vanderbilt while downing Berea.

Starting with the Xavier match on April 27, the team lost only to a strong Miami of Ohio outfit and Cincinnati. Cincinnati reversed the tables on the Cats who had earlier beaten them 8-1 at Cincy. The Queen City boys eked out a 5-4 win on Kentucky's courts.

The record posted by the team this year is one of the best in recent seasons. Last year's squad finished with a 5-8 mark. Coach Dr. H. H. Downing has ranked this team second only to his 1937 team which won 11 and lost 1.

Eight men earned letters this season. Captain Ed Rodman, Bill Evans, George Carey, Ted Phillips, Glenn Dorroh and George Koper had lettered previously while Don Sebott and Joe Teague were playing their first season.

Only one man, Rodman, will be definitely lost to the squad for next season. Evans will return to school next season for graduate work and there is a possibility that Phillips may also return. The squad will be further strengthened by the addition of Bill Gess, a transfer student, who was ineligible for competition this year.

SAE's Win All-Year Trophy; Flynn Takes Individual Award

Sigma Alpha Epsilon continued their domination on the I-M scene by winning their fourth straight all-year participation trophy. The big cup was awarded at the intramural banquet held last Monday night.

SAE broke their own record in copping the trophy for the fourth year in a row. They had previously won the trophy for three straight years in 1933 through 1940. They have now won the award 12 times since its beginning in 1929. Sigma Chi ranks second in number of wins with five.

The winners have a total of 335 points for the season with points for the bicycle race not included in the standings. Delta Tau Delta with 200 points, SX with 180 and Phi Delta Theta with 178 are still in contention for the runner-up spot.

SPORTS IN REVIEW—UK teams fared well in all sports this season but football, basketball and swimming gained the top ranks. Coach Blanton Collier stepped into a huge job but the results of spring practice show he'll have no trouble handling it. And who could forget the great Wildcat five of Coach Adolph Rupp. Cliff Hagan, Frank Ramsey and Lou Tsioropoulos led the team to the mythical national championship.

NORTH AMERICAN HAS BUILT MORE AIRPLANES THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY IN THE WORLD

"O.K...You're on your own"

Moments ago his instructor said, "Good luck son. Now you try it alone." And as the young cadet turns to his plane he feels a sudden thrill run through him. He is sure he's ready...after those long months of tough, hard training. And he is ready. He'll win his wings, because those who chose him know he has the qualities a pilot must possess.

You too can know the same thrill that young man feels now...if you have the stuff in you to become an aviation cadet. Ahead of you lies a great adventure...flying with the U. S. Navy or Air Force in the planes that guard our nation's shores.

You'll meet them all. Planes like this T-28, North American's trainer for the Navy and Air Force, that outflies many World War II fighters. And when you've won your wings you may graduate to a squadron that flies FJ-3 Fury Jets, Korea-famed F-86 Sabre Jets...or America's fastest production jet fighter, the supersonic F-100 Super Sabre.

Yes, there's high adventure ahead for you, if you take the challenge a flying career in the services offers now...if you're ready to be on your own.

Ain't Education Just The Darndest Thing?

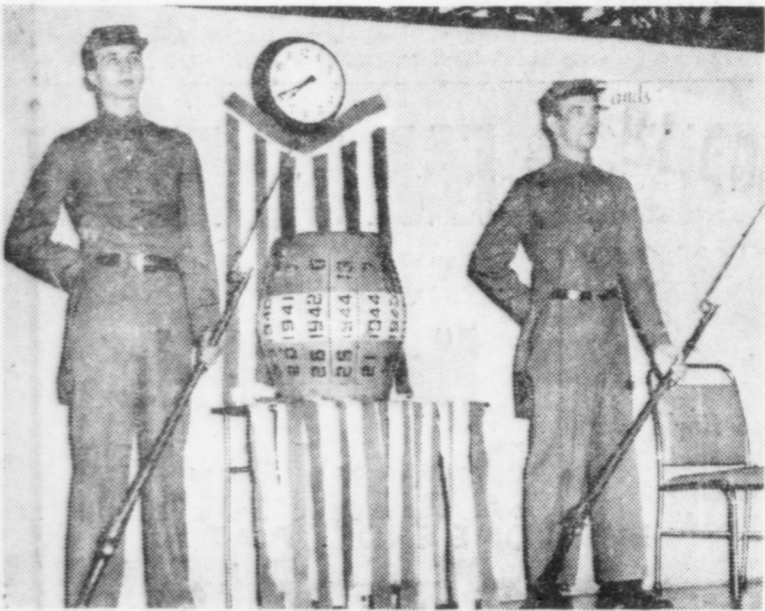

SURE, SARGE! Well, the army has been criticized for a lot of things ever since Caesar started the custom of KP, but, after seeing how the army outlook has changed, we'll forgive them. This young lass, her name lost in our messy files, is supposedly signing up for an ROTC course at registration last semester. As anyone who has been through registration can tell you, it wasn't a bad mistake at all. Not half as bad as signing up for a cooking and nutrition course—when you're an engineer; or signing up for a breezy five hour course in electrical engineering—when you're majoring in home ec. Ah, such is life. And what a life! Absolutely miserable!

BLOW, MAN, BLOW! Good old Charlie Archer, former news editor of the Kernel, demonstrated his talents for State Police Captain Cornwell in a test to determine whether Charlie was drunk—all staged, of course. According to the best available information, the photographer assigned to cover a feature on the police lab in the Journalism Building grabbed Charlie while he was on his way home to shave. Anyway, the whole idea of the test is to have the suspected drunk blow up a balloon so the alcoholic content of his breath—if any—can be detected.

OLD NEVILLE HALL, home of psychology, grand old landmark of the campus, with an emphasis on the old. Neville, bless its time-worn structure, was used in a story dealing with UK's so-called assets a while back. We predict that, within the next 50 years, a plaque will be glued to its walls in memory of professors and secretaries beamed by falling plaster and bannister posts.

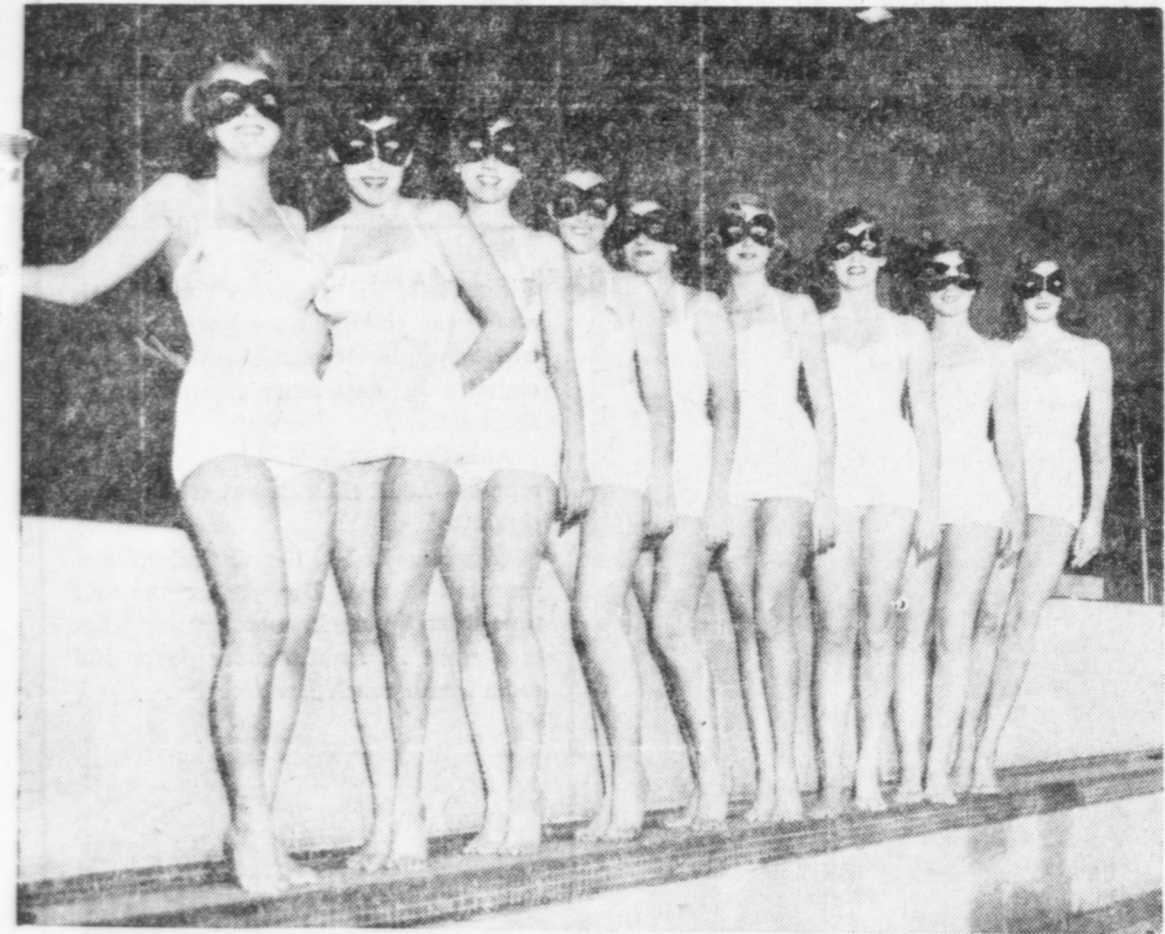

AH SAY, SUH, the South done riz again. At any rate, the South lone riz long enough to provide a couple of guards for the precious trophy won from #1's & #2's last year. You know how it is, with all those thieves from #3's & #4's running around after football games. You're sort of forced to place guards. And, sub, we certainly hope that when next year's Big Game comes rolling around, we beat the tar but of #5's & #6's again.

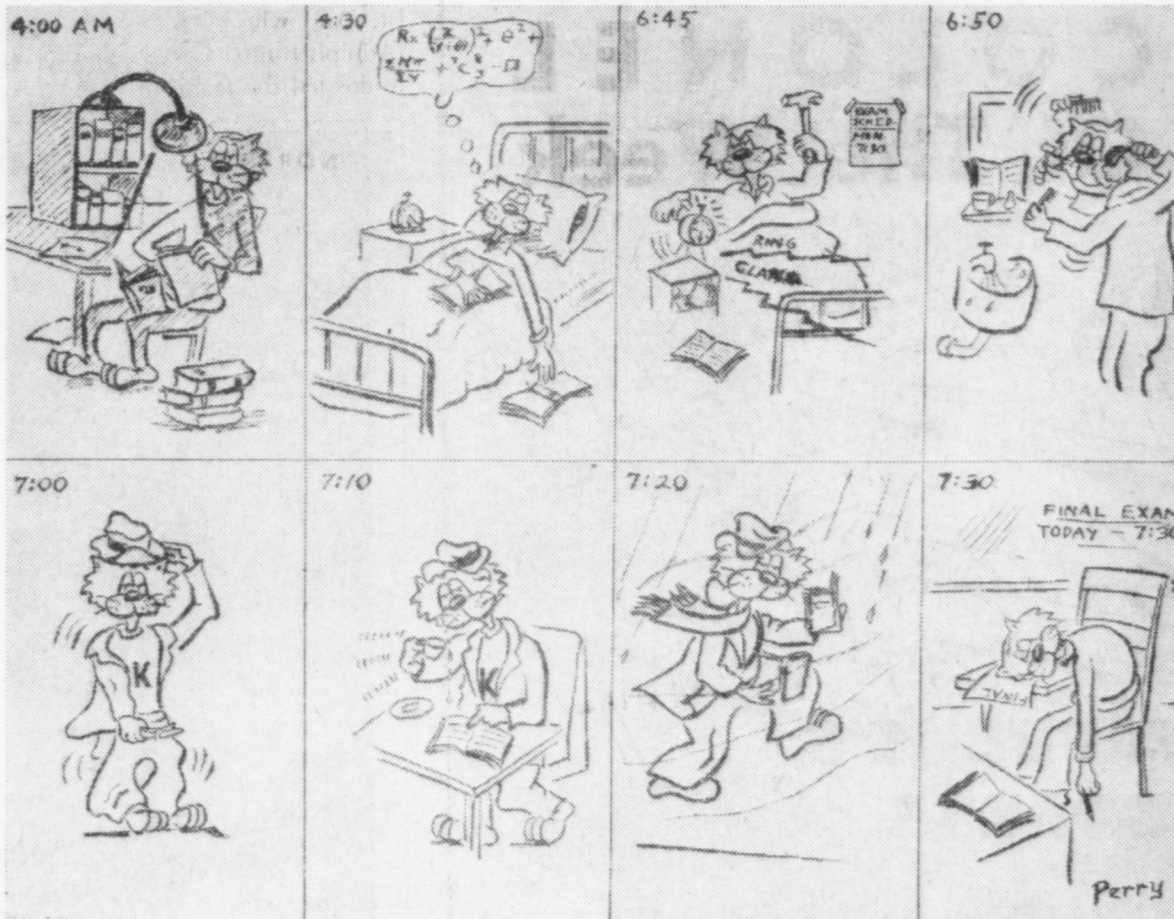

NOW HERE'S A GAL who's a Phi Beta Kappa, getting her face all mussed up with snow. Elaine Moore, who's pretty hot with the backs, doesn't mind a little frigid face massage at all. As a matter of fact, it's just what a girl needs to give her that fresh, alert feeling in the morning—and that wonderful double pneumonia shortly afterward. Elaine is graduating this year, but there's no doubt that this kind of horseplay—or should we say, snowplay—will continue as long as there are: (1) pretty coeds, (2) men, (3) snow. Philosophizing further, one might say that the snow is unnecessary.

OH, YOU DOLL. We don't know your name, but that doesn't mean much. What's in a name, anyway? It's easy to see that a gal with your looks doesn't particularly need a name—just a police guard. You appeared in the Cincinnati Summer Opera not so long back, and now we're sorry we forgot our tickets. And that smile! Man, it may not be Mona Lisa, but it sure serves its purpose. Sort of restores a fellow's faith in the opposite sex. If you belong to the world of art, we're all in favor of studying art. In short, we like!

LEGS, LEGS, LEGS, and all of them belong to the not-so-wet Blue Marlins, the human version of Old Neptune's mermaid friends. The masks seem a little unnecessary, because we might want to take a brief look at your faces—which, we're sure, are as pretty as your fins. For some strange reason, water has much more appeal when you're around. It just doesn't seem like the same old H₂O used in test tubes—and for drinking. It very definitely gives water that extra something, that plus quality which should make it a successful element with college students. While you're around, we feel an odd urge to drain the pool.

EARLY TO BED and early to rise—makes a man feel lousy. But don't be discouraged by Willy the Wildcat. His ways of life are strictly for the cats. In the first place, it's a bad habit to go to bed during exam week. Gets you in a nasty sort of habit that's hard to break. And, under any circumstances, it's never wise to knock yourself out with a hammer. Just crawl off a scenic cliff if you have trouble sleeping (if you have our kind of trouble, you don't sleep). Another thing—don't drink coffee while existing through exam week, emphasis on existing. You won't have enough money left to wire the bad news home to your folks.

THE FACE IS FAMILIAR. Wonder if this guy has been around before? We'd like to pledge him.

IT'S JUST POSSIBLE that these gorgeous babes were part of the attraction of last year's Sigma Chi Derby. Even if they weren't, it's plain to see that, by themselves, they're attractions. Sights like this make us appreciate our eyes much more than we do while we're studying. Now, Mac, if you don't like these, you'd might as well leave for the Babbling Brook Rest Home.

MAY DAY FLOATS! As every fraternity and sorority man can tell you, these floats prove that man has an inventive mind. By taking a few thousand feet of chicken wire, several tons of crepe paper, a lot of patience, two or three hundred hours of work, and a lot of tears, a real work of art can be turned out—just to make Suky happy (which isn't at all a bad thing to do). And so it comes to pass that the Suky parade—bolstered by fraternity and sorority work—reveals the majesty of creativeness, the splendor of wire and paper, the ingenuity of thousands of pledges, the hopes of newspaper photographers, and the bane of street cleaners. To be perfectly frank, everyone has a lot of fun—tearing them down, and a few people have been known to enjoy watching the parade. Provided that wire doesn't give out or paper blow off in a strong breeze, the whole town can stand by and watch the clever themes putt down the street, decorated with all kinds of interesting objects, the most interesting of which is the girls. Ah, yes, there's nothing like the May Day parade. Nothing!

Thinlies Break Even In 6 Meets As Curry Registers 92 Points

By BILL BURLESON

The track thinlies of Dr. Don Seaton have closed out a fair season with a record of three wins and three losses.

The Big Blue cindermen opened the season outmatched in every way against the Buckeyes of Ohio State. The Kentuckians did not have enough steam to get by and took an 86-46½ lacing.

Kentucky then rolled over two rivals, Sewanee and Morehead, unmercifully. The scores were just about as lopsided in these contests as the opening one was with the exception that Kentucky was the victor. The scores for these meets were 722-3-55 1/3 and 87-47 respectively.

Kentucky then turned right around and took two more lacings from rivals in the Southeastern Conference. The old bugaboo Tennessee took their meet from Kentucky 512-3-79 1/3 while the boys from Vanderbilt gave the Big Blue their worst defeat 881-12-421 1/2.

Thinlies Top Cincinnati

In a triangular meet at Hanover College, UK took the measure of Cincinnati and Hanover. The scores in this meet were UK 69, Cincinnati 46, and Hanover 44.

Kentucky's small contingent had to be satisfied with 61 1/5 points at the SEC track meet. The best that any one individual did in this meet was Billy Mitchell who tied for third in the high jump.

The high point man on the track team, and probably in all of the lesser sports, was Jess Curry, sophomore from Portsmouth, Virginia, who is here at the University of Kentucky on a basketball scholarship.

Although busy with basketball until March and playing baseball on the side during the early season, Curry was a little shy of terrific when he began to concentrate on the track and field events alone.

Curry Gathers 92 Points

Curry missed out on more points when he went home because of the illness of his mother and didn't get to compete against Morehead.

Curry gathered 92 1/2 points during the brief cinder campaign and Coach Seaton doubts that any other UK performer in the sport ever scored as much.

The soph picked up 11½ points as Kentucky was losing to a superior Ohio State team and 14½ during the water logged trackmeet with Sewanee. It was after this event that Curry began to concentrate on track alone.

He probably set a school record when he notched 25 points against Tennessee, winning two hurdle races, the broad jump and the 100-yard dash, coming in second in the javelin and tying for second in the high jump.

He then added 17 1/3 points against Vanderbilt and 22 in the triangular meet with Cincinnati and Hanover. Curry was disappointing in the SEC meet but Seaton is confident he will score well the next two years and will possibly develop into a low hurdler of high merit.

Frank Scott, who ran the mile and two-mile runs, was second among the Thinlies in scoring with 40 points for the season. Eddie Ernst added 36½ for the campaign and Don Weaver was next among the leaders with 36.

Thursday gets its name from the Norse god, Thor. Thor was thrully one of the finest godth the Northmen worshipped.

If the sun exploded, Southern California would be severely singed.

Golfers Split Final Matches

Kentucky's golf team, coached by Johnny Owens, wound up their 1954 campaign May 24, by dropping a match to the University of Cincinnati, 8½-18½, on the Boiling Springs links.

The loss gave the linksters a season's record of six wins as against nine setbacks. It was the second time this year that Cincinnati had beaten Kentucky, the Bearcats having copped the previous match at home, 12-6.

The team, composed of one freshman, three sophomores, two juniors and one senior, loses only one man before next season's battling begins. The only face which will be missing is that of John Hawkins, the senior member of the squad. Incidentally, every member of the present team was awarded a letter.

The team fell far short of the 11-3 mark left by last year's golf team, but the ranks had been greatly depleted before the start of the present campaign. Golfing wizard Gay Brewer entered the Army to leave a big gap in the squad and most of the returning lettermen had had only one year's intercollegiate competition.

The squad opened the 1954 season by dropping their most one-sided match of the year to Ohio State, 24-3. Subsequently, they defeated T.P.L. lost to Vanderbilt, whipped Xavier, lost to Alabama, Ohio State, and Cincinnati while topping Albion and Xavier.

The team journeyed to Shelbyville and placed second in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Tournament with 945 points on April 23, 24. The 1953 version won the same event with a low total of 921 points.

After losing matches to Louisville and Vanderbilt, the Wildcats drubbed Centre, 17-1. Losses to Cincinnati and Louisville followed, during which time the team won its last match by trouncing Centre again, this time by 16½-1½.

Yeiser To Receive Commerce Award

Billy Joe Yeiser, senior in the College of Commerce, has been selected as the UK recipient of the Wall Street Journal Student Achievement Award for maintaining the highest scholarship record in the investments course.

Willard's .358 Tops UK Baseballers, Grawemeyer Tabbed Leading Pitcher

By DAVE NAKDIMEN

Kentucky's Captain and third baseman, Miles Willard, has proved to be the bright spot in an otherwise average 1954 baseball campaign.

The hard-hitting Willard rapped out 29 safeties in 31 trips to the plate for a sparkling .358 mark. Included in his productivity were four doubles, three triples, three homers, and nineteen R.B.I.'s. Willard also filled in at shortstop during the year and proved to be the Wildcats' steadiest defensive operator.

His mark is not the highest ever obtained by a Wildcat baseballer, however. Back in 1949, All-American Dom Fucci clubbed opposing pitching for a torrid .459 average and collected five homers and 30 R.B.I.'s in addition. Fucci, incidentally, is the only Kentucky baseball player ever to be selected as an All-American.

Others Have High Averages

Other Wildcats who have topped Willard's average during the past six years are John Stough's 1943 mark of .408; Allen Hamilton's .375 average of the same year; Ben Zarnanka's .396 figure in 1950; Frank Ramsey, .410, 1951; Bob Terrell, .363, 1951; and Larry Jones, .379, 1952.

The only men to top Willard's R.B.I. total during the six-year period were Ramsey's 21 in 1951 and Fucci's 20 in 1949. It is doubtful that any of the Kentuckians of the past six years have been more consistent than Willard in delivering hits at crucial points, however.

The Wildcats' second leading hitter of 1954 was a pitcher, of all people. Hurler Hugh Coy rapped the ball at an imposing .343 clip during the season to grab the second spot. Outfielder Doug Lawhorn registered a .341 mark while seeing limited service.

Tied for the pitching lead, percentage-wise, were Coy and Phil Grawemeyer with four wins and three losses each. Grawemeyer was far more effective however as he allowed only 11 earned runs in 50 innings for a brilliant 1.98 E.R.A. per nine frames. Coy gave up 25 earned runs in 58 innings for a 3.88 E.R.A.

Hurlers Have Faulty Support

Neither Coy, Grawemeyer nor the other members of the staff had benefit of good fielding as the Wildcat defense committed 57 errors for the season, a .917 average. This mark is not too bad in view of the fact that no Kentucky team has bettered .940 during the past six years.

Kentucky had a 1954 record of nine wins and ten losses, a .473 win percentage. This pales in comparison with the 1950 club which won 14, lost four, and went to the semifinals of the N.C.A.A. baseball tournament. The team did not win the S.E.C. crown however, losing to Alabama in a championship play-off. The Cats that year drubbed Tennessee's Vols four straight times.

The best winning record compiled by a Kentucky baseball team was registered shortly after the turn of the century in 1906. That year, the Wildcats coached by H. E. Reed won 12 games and lost but two. On the debit side of the ledger, the 1934 squad had a record of one win and 11 losses under the tutelage of John Devereaux. Kentucky's overall mark since 1903 shows the Wildcats with an aggregate of 307 victories and 146 losses, a .678 percentage.

Although this season's All-SEC team has not yet been released, it is expected to have Willard as one of its members. If he does make the squad, he will join such luminaries as John Stough, Frank Ramsey, Dom Fucci, and Ben Zarnanka, as select baseballers. Charlie Keller, a team selection in 1952, received a large bonus from the St. Louis Cardinals for signing that year, but the first sacker is now in service.

Baseball Has Long History

Kentucky baseball dates back to possibly before 1876. There is the possibility of such competition as part of the athletic activities at old Kentucky University. It is not known whether this activity was of the intercollegiate nature or not. The sport in the early days was played on a lot on Broadway between 5th and 6th and later at the City Park or the baseball park on the site of what is now the practice lot of Stoll Field.

It is believed that Kentucky's first venture into intercollegiate baseball occurred on April 3, 1896, when Centre and the University of Kentucky (then known as Kentucky State or Kentucky A&M) split a double-header. Centre won the first game, 12-6, and the Wildcats took the nightcap, 13-9.

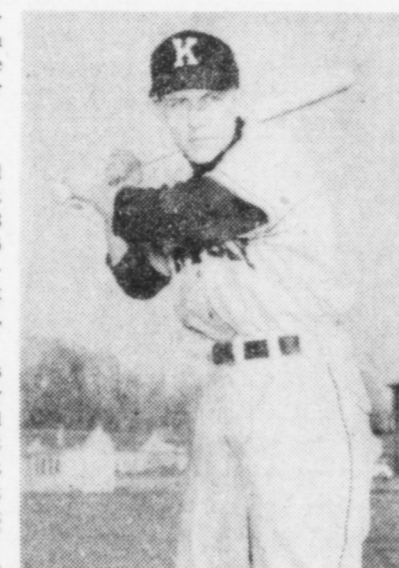

So Kentucky won its first baseball game fifty-eight years ago and its last thus far a couple of weeks ago. Although the university has seldom turned out anything resembling a powerhouse, a fact due to the absence of baseball scholarships, the sport has a long and interesting history at Kentucky. The team sometimes has performed miserably, but the action has seldom been dull.

Professor (irritated): If there are any morons in the room, please stand up.

A long pause, and a lone freshman rose.

Professor: "What, do you consider yourself a moron?"

Freshman: "Well, not exactly that, sir; but I do hate to see you standing all alone by yourself."

Visionary Young Engineers Work Years Ahead on Jet Fighter-Bomber Design...

There's drama on the drawing boards at Republic! A great new jet fighter-bomber is being created, years ahead of its time. Like its famous predecessors, it will be the product of young men of vision, working in an atmosphere encouraging individual initiative.

For, Republic has long believed that its engineers are creative men who cannot be cast into a mold and still maintain the individuality and imagination that are the lifeblood of aviation. At Republic, the ability and creativity of the engineer thrives on a diet of challenging assignments that permit him to probe and express new ideas.

This approach has been notably successful. Since 1931, Republic has been a leader in the aircraft industry, and today employs over 27,000 people, with an engineer ratio of 1 to 8. From the first all-metal plane to the famous Thunderbolts, Thunderjets, and Thunderstreaks, Republic planes have been pace-setters in aviation. And Republic engineers, sharing in this success, are at the peak of their profession, earning top pay in industry.

Republic engineers know, too, the pleasures of good living. Centrally located on Long Island, with its model suburban communities and abundance of year-round recreational facilities, Republic is less than an hour from New York City and its unparalleled cultural and entertainment attractions.

For further information concerning our training programs, which prepare graduate engineers for positions in aircraft engineering or manufacturing supervision, please write directly to your special Republic representative, Mr. Charles J. Kelson, Employment Manager.
